

"Legislators should carefully consider any deal they make with city hall. Note how Sen Connor got "respected..."

From a report by Jonathan Hicks in the New York Times, August 13, 2008:

Senator Connor, who was first elected in 1978 and is one of the state's best-known election lawyers, said he had no idea why Mr. Bloomberg would endorse his opponent. "To my knowledge there is no particular reason why he would do that," Mr. Connor said in an interview. "I agreed to vote for his congestion pricing plan. I guess this is my reward for that."

Read the entire article at http://www.nytimes.com/2008/08/13/nyregion/13endorse.html?_r=1&ref=nyregion&oref=slogin