

Keep NYC Free

www.keepnycfree.com

For Immediate Release: November 2, 2015

Contact: Corey Bearak
(718) 343-6779; cell: (516) 343-6207

Pols Taking Their Toll... On Us!

Michael Goodwin, concluded his Sunday's New York Post column with a succinct and concise commentary, "Pols taking a toll on us," on the regressive congestion tax scheme. Commenting on a caucus of electeds who label themselves progressive supporting a tax infamously regressive by its nature, the Post columnist started "Headline: City Pols Back Congestion Pricing." and followed it,

Of course they do. They create congestion, then force others to pay for it. That's their definition of public service: The public serves them.

See Goodwin's column and scroll towards the final paragraphs.

For some additional reading, Keep NYC Free recommends:

*Ups & Downs;Go Ask Alice: Up Is Down; Down Is Up; When Progressive Means Regressive

*Council Member Miller Breaks from Progressive Caucus Colleagues, Opposes Congestion Pricing

*A Message for some legislators a reminder that toll-tax schemes offer neither net revenues nor relief from traffic.

*Same Old Wine (city council) report offers nothing; follows schemer approach to barter projects for tolls.

Keep NYC Free (KeepNYCFree.com) continues to emphasize how alternative revenues could secure resources to support public transit in a truly progressive manner.